

Picophotonics: Visible Invisible

Giorgio Adamo<sup>2</sup>, Eng Aik Chan<sup>2</sup>, Jinxiang Li<sup>1</sup>, Tongjun Liu<sup>1</sup>, S. Kurdumov<sup>1</sup>, Kevin F. MacDonald<sup>1</sup>, Jun-Yu Ou<sup>1</sup>, Nikitas Papasimakis<sup>1</sup>, Eric Plum<sup>1</sup>, Tanchao Pu<sup>1</sup>, Carolina Rendon-Barraza<sup>2</sup>, Yu Wang<sup>1</sup>, Nikolay I. Zheludev<sup>1,2</sup>

<sup>1</sup>University of Southampton, UK

<sup>2</sup>Nanyang Technological University, Singapore

The resolution of conventional microscopy is limited to a half of the wavelength of light. We report on recent advances in applications of deep learning and topologically structured light to far-field non-destructive imaging with deep subwavelength resolution and to picometric metrology.