

HIGHLIGHTS

- Metabolic dysfunction-associated fatty liver disease is associated with higher risk of some tachyarrhythmias in patients with type 2 diabetes.
- This risk remains significant after adjustment for common cardiovascular risk factors, diabetes-related variables, and other potential confounders.
- The magnitude of this risk increases with severity of liver disease.