

Why do stroke survivors not always receive the recommended minimum amount of therapy?

The person

Effects of the stroke

Functional ability

Engagement with therapy

The individual therapist

Being "Person-centred"

Managing resources

The stroke MDT

Competing healthcare priorities

Team decision-making

The guideline

Measuring guideline achievement

Is the guideline right?

A therapy 'prescription'

Organisational politics

The organisation

Model of service delivery

Resources